“According to your will passionately be with setting it forth.”

A Khalil Gibran tribute to W. B. Yeats

1 I was already some twenty-six thousand words into 2 my next work when word came to me about nine o'clock
3 on Saturday evening, the 7th December 2013, that I 4 should consider doing another work at the same time.

5 I was sitting on the large crescent moon shaped seat in the 6 Lobby Bar of the Silver Springs Hotel in Tivoli in Cork city. I was 7 facing the glass encased fireplace and the entrance, and enjoying a 8 cup of tea and a sticky toffee pudding with caramel ice cream and 9 caramel sauce. I had brought along with me a red covered notebook 10 into which I was about to write some thoughts on my present 11 project when his voice like a fragrant breeze came to me. I knew 12 straightway whose voice it was as I had heard it a number of times 13 down through the years. And he was saying,

14 “Should my voice fade in your ears, and my love vanish in 15 your memory, then I will come again, and with a richer heart and 16 lips more yielding to the spirit will I speak. Yea, I shall return with 17 the tide, and though death may hide me, and the greater silence 18 enfold me, yet again will I seek your understanding. And not in vain 19 will I seek. If aught I have said is truth, that truth shall reveal itself 20 in a clearer voice, and in words more kin to your thoughts. Good 21 evening, Richard.”

22 Me: Good evening, Khalil.

23 It was the voice of Khalil Gibran.

24 Khalil: Richard, pardon me for interrupting your thoughts, but 25 I need to ask of you a favor.

26 Me: How can I be of help, Khalil?

27 Khalil: You know well how I greatly admire your fellow 28 countryman, William Butler Yeats, Richard, and how I have always 29 wanted to express my admiration for him. While I had the privilege 30 of drawing a portrait of him in 1911 in my studio ‘The Hermitage’ 31 in New York, my literary oeuvre is devoid of a poetic tribute to 32 him. Thus have I felt my literary output to be insufficient; to be 33 incomplete. I have a need to sing a deeper song to the world; to 34 build a greater tower in the sky which I would dedicate to William.
35 Since I came over to this side of living, the all of eighty-two years

36 ago of your time, that need has grown stronger. Here we are oft 37 meeting, and always talking about our previous existences - he as a 38 Yeats of Ireland, and I as a Gibran of Lebanon. One thing he 39 mentioned to me, that has stayed with me, is that before coming 40 over to this side, he desired to edit much of his earlier letters and 41 even give shape anew to some of his poems. This got me thinking 42 about my own writings, in particular my works written in English.
43 Now while I don't feel any need to edit them or even reshape them 44 anew, I do want however to use them to create a single work; a 45 poem which would be a tribute to him.

46 Me: While the idea of dedicating a work; a poem to William is 47 admirable, Khalil, I don't think it is a great idea to take your known 48 works and present them again to the world in a new form. For the 49 past ninety-five years or so your beloved readers have got used to 50 those works as you originally presented them. They have become 51 endeared to their hearts and engraved in their minds.

52 Khalik: I know; I know that, Richard, and I greatly appreciate it, 53 but tell me where is the joy in songs oft too heard? Both can 54 comfortably coexist. My beloved readers will grow to cherish the 55 new work too as they did the older works. And besides, we need to 56 be continuously transforming our ideas, for by doing so will we be 57 transforming ourselves within the myriad transformations. We need 58 ever to be setting ourselves and our works free from the bondage of 59 yesterdays while at the same time sustaining their integrity.

60 Me: Admirable. How do I fit into the picture, Khalil?

61 Khalik: I have been fascinated, Richard with your present 62 project; working as you are on Thomas Aquinas' {Summa 63 Theologica}. Your new style of verse; a new reading style for the 64 times that will take mankind farther out into space, and bring 65 visitors anew to the planet has inspired me to look at my own work 66 in such a light. As you are wanting for the readers of your project, I 67 would like my readers also to pause where a word invites them to 68 pause, and to only move on and then only slowly too when the text 69 itself gives them leave to do so. What I would like you to do is to 70 place down verbatim what I will dictate to you; to immaculately 71 transmit sifted words which I have already, in anticipation of our 72 collaboration, set free from their original syntactical husks.

A Khalil Gibran tribute to W. B. Yeats

73 Me: It sounds very interesting, Khalil. And how soon would 74 you need us to start?

75 Khalil: As soon as possible, Richard for I am excited about 76 sharing it with you; with William, and the world.

77 Me: I have never concurrently worked on two projects; two 78 adventures, but for you, Khalil I will make an exception.

79 Khalil: Wonderful, Richard. Thank you.

80 Me: Do you have any publisher in mind to which I should 81 submit the work?

82 Khalil: I don't want the initial work to be published by anyone 83 save by you yourself, Richard. I want you to publish it yourself as 84 you have done with your own books.

85 Me: You mean for I to self-publish it, Khalil?

86 Khalil: Yes, Richard. You can title it as follows: 'Bradawn Yeats 87 - A Khalil Gibran tribute to W. B. Yeats -' Have the cover be snow 88 white, and contain Auguste Faguet's wonderful illustration "Cedar 89 of Lebanon". Have the title be in green, and the rest in black. Below 90 the illustration have your own name. On the back cover let there be 91 but the following:

92 Should my voice fade in your ears, and my love vanish in your 93 memory, then I will come again, and with a richer heart and lips more 94 yielding to the spirit will I speak. Yea, I shall return with the tide, and 95 though death may hide me, and the greater silence enfold me, yet 96 again will I seek your understanding. And not in vain will I seek. If 97 aught I have said is truth, that truth shall reveal itself in a clearer
98 voice, and in words more kin to your thoughts. Khalil Gibran

99 Of an eve and midday hour in December 2013, the voice of Khalil 100 Gibran visits philosopher, poet, publisher: His Excellency Richard 101 Serenity of Éire, the Starlight Ambassador."

102 Me: And what about the mystical paintings that were contained 103 in the original works?

104 Khalil: Have a young Maud Gonne and the cedar at the dawn; 105 suns, moons, stars be of the day, a golden phoenix in flight by eve.

106 Me: I see. "Serenity of Éire, the Starlight Ambassador?"

107 Khalil: In my eyes, Richard this is of who and what you are.

A Khalil Gibran tribute to W. B. Yeats

108 Oh, and recount how the work came about. Line number all.

109 Me: As you have spoken, all in all will fully be in accordance.
110 Looking forward with wonder, Khalil I am to this great adventure.

111 Khalik: I am too, Richard. Thank you. Adieu.

112 At that, Khalil's fragrant voice left me, and I resumed making 113 notes for my own work before going and collecting Sung-ja from 114 the Laya Healthcare Christmas party which was taking place in the 115 Carrigaline Court Hotel. I like the Laya slogan: "Looking after you 116 always."

117 On the way home, I mentioned to Sung-ja how that when I 118 making notes for my work in Silver Springs, the familiar voice of 119 Khalil Gibran had visited me. She was pleased, and encouraged me 120 to work with him if I felt I could do two works at the same time.

121 The next day, it being Sunday, and the Feast Day of Our Lady
122 of the Immaculate Conception, Sung-ja and I had decided to drive 123 down south, to the beautiful town of Youghal on the coast, to enjoy 124 strolling and chatting along its charming strand.

125 Now, it was about the midday hour, and when with having 126 reached via the boardwalk the 'Sleeping whale' pipe, we turned 127 around and were walking back along the strand itself towards the 128 town, when of a moment there was a silence in our chatting, and we 129 were listening to the waving waters coming ashore. And with Sung-130 ja sensing, I to be in another place of thought, let me in that place 131 while we strolled along in each other's contented company. She is 132 used to me drifting away into other worlds of thought whether it be 133 when we are strolling or driving. Frequently it happens when we are 134 sitting watching television together, that my mind travels away 135 faraway into the nearby star glowing hearth of wonderment.

136 And the fragrant voice was upon the breeze.

137 Khalik: Richard, pardon me for interrupting your thoughts, but 138 might now be a good time to give you that poem?

139 Me: Indeed, it would be an excellent time, Khalil, for I am 140 strolling in the very finest of company, and in this a most lovely 141 setting. According to your will passionately be with setting it forth."

142 Khalik: Splendid. Then here it is, Richard.

A Khalil Gibran tribute to W. B. Yeats

143 For the next five to seven minutes, Khalil dictated the entire 144 poem to my mind. And being fully in accordance with his wishes, 145 this is what he dictated to me while I strolling there along the strand 146 with Sung-ja.

2827 And thus, Richard completes the sayings of Bradawn Yeats.

2828 Beloved Readers, this a new creation of mine which has been 2829 made manifest on this day, Sunday the 8th December 2013, 2830 here on this strand of Youghal in the county of Cork of the 2831 isle of Éire. It has been made possible by the attentive ear
2832 of my ever-obliging, dear friend - the Irish philosopher 2833 poet, Richard of Éire. A humble tribute it is acknowledging 2834 for all time my ongoing gratitude and admiration for 2835 William Butler Yeats and his poems.

2836 Habibi, thank you so much, Richard.

2837 Me: You are most welcome, Khalil my friend. It was an honor 2838 and a joy. William will no doubt find it to be a poem

A Khalil Gibran tribute to W. B. Yeats

- 2839 after his own heart.
- 2840 Khalil: I hope so, Richard.
- 2841 And in a moment in my vision saw I, Khalil strolling upon the 2842 waves in the company of William Butler Yeats.
- 2843 William: Thank you, dear Oriental friend, Khalil. It is an 2844 absolutely magical poem, and an esoteric! How admirable is 2845 the generosity of your great heart. There is a passion for life, 2846 love, and the spiritual that exquisitely shapes this mystical 2847 work. With deep gratitude will I treasure it for eternity.
- 2848 Khalil: Thank you, William, my Celtic friend. That you have 2849 warmly received it, and find it greatly to your liking is for me 2850 an indescribable joy; a joy greater than in the giving of it.
- 2851 William: The majestic cedar against the snow white 2852 background is outstanding.
- 2853 Khalil: Beloved noblesse of our Lebanese people, William is 2854 the Cedrus libani.
- 2855 William: I adore the green hued title, and honored I am that 2856 you should use my surname. The play on the personal name 2857 'Bradawn', Gibran, and the Gaeilge 'bradán' (salmon), and 2858 'bright dawn' is a skilful and lovely touch. It shows how well 2859 you know me, and how it is I delight in watching salmon 2860 waiting at weirs to leap to leaping. Ah; yes, and Maud my 2861 beloved here she is too. Thank you, Khalil. Your superb use of 2862 words: 'birds', 'rose', 'tower', 'gold' is most impressive — suns, 2863 moons, stars, and a flying golden phoenix. Yes; yes to all!
- 2864 Khalil: Happy custodians and weavers of ancient symbols anew 2865 we are, William.
- 2866 William: Yes, indeed we are Khalil. The poem has the feel of a 2867 musical score to it; a libretto.
- 2868 Khalil: According to music are we wondrously arranged; so too 2869 therefore our words upon the ether, and in the ink flow.
- 2870 William: Oh, so beautifully expressed.
- 2871 Khalil: As we stroll on our wavy way, bard William, would you 2872 mind reciting for me your lyrical masterpiece of unaging

2873 intellect ~ Sailing to Byzantium?

2874 William: It would give me the greatest of pleasure, Khalil.

2875 That is no country for old men. The young 2876 In one another's arms, birds in the trees
2877 — Those dying generations — at their song, 2878 The salmon-falls, the mackerel-crowded seas, 2879 Fish, flesh, or fowl, commend all summer long 2880 Whatever is begotten, born, and dies.
2881 Caught in that sensual music all neglect
2882 Monuments of unageing intellect.

2883 An aged man is but a paltry thing, 2884 A tattered coat upon a stick, unless 2885 Soul clap its hands and sing, and louder sing
2886 For every tatter in its mortal dress,
2887 Nor is there singing school but studying
2888 Monuments of its own magnificence;
2889 And therefore I have sailed the seas and come 2890 To the holy city of Byzantium.

2891 O sages standing in God's holy fire
2892 As in the gold mosaic of a wall,
2893 Come from the holy fire, perne in a gyre,
2894 And be the singing-masters of my soul.
2895 Consume my heart away; sick with desire
2896 And fastened to a dying animal
2897 It knows not what it is; and gather me
2898 Into the artifice of eternity.

2899 Once out of nature I shall never take 2900 My bodily form from any natural thing, 2901 But such a form as Grecian goldsmiths make 2902 Of hammered gold and gold enamelling
2903 To keep a drowsy Emperor awake;
2904 Or set upon a golden bough to sing
2905 To lords and ladies of Byzantium
2906 Of what is past, or passing, or to come.

2907 And they went away upon their happy journeying on out o'er 2908 the ever-welcoming sea, while Sung-ja and me continued we upon 2909 our joyful company, along the ever-welcoming shore.
